New auction.

World's first Apple iPhone 12 Pro Max with USB Type-C port

If you liked the USB-C iPhone X project from Kenny Pi and you wished you had one too, so there is one home-made gem. Apple is quite conservative about adding components used by competitors, although it did on iPad Pro and Macbooks. And why NO on iPhones? No one knows the answer, but it will probably be around Apple MFi certification.

So the only way is to customize your own iPhone. It sounds really simple, but after watching the mentioned Kenny Pi's video, it's actually like a patient's brain surgery. One bad move and no iPhone and no joy :-)

We decided to sacrifice one of our iPhones and test our skill and endurance. We have implemented original MFi certified chip from Apple and replaced the original Lightning to a high quality USB-C port. The final result you can see on photos and video in link below.

Fully tested. Fully worked.

What is working with USB-C cable:

- charging with USB-C to USB-C or USB-C to USB-A cable
- video and photo sync
- music sync from iTunes/Finder
- data sync/backup.

Good Design

The phone's design is good. Fast. Wishing I could use the phone because of the design. Less weightier than iPhone 11 Pro Max.
